The film was directed by Lee Sholem and stars Charles Herbert as Cambo, Billy Chapin as Tobor, and Karin Dor as Dr. Nordstrom. The film was a critical and commercial failure, but it has since gained a cult following.

The film's plot is simple but effective. A group of scientists, led by Dr. Nordstrom, create a robot named Tobor. Tobor is designed to be a peaceful and helpful robot, but he is soon corrupted by a group of criminals led by Dr. Van der Velde. The criminals use Tobor to commit a series of crimes, including bank robberies and kidnappings. Cambo, a young boy who befriends Tobor, tries to stop the criminals and save the robot.

The film's special effects are impressive for its time. Tobor is a convincing robot, and the film's action sequences are well-executed. The film's cast is also strong, with Charles Herbert giving a standout performance as Cambo.
