What is Different About the Young People of Today?

Young people today are growing up in a world that is more interconnected, diverse, and technologically advanced than ever before.

These factors are shaping a new generation of young people who are:

- More globally aware and empathetic

- Less likely to accept injustice and inequality
- More comfortable with diversity and inclusion
- More comfortable with technology and innovation

What Can We Do to Support Them?

As parents, educators, and community leaders, we have a responsibility to support young people in making a difference in the world.

Here are a few things we can do:

- Provide opportunities for young people to learn about and engage with global issues.
- Encourage them to develop critical thinking skills and learn how to solve problems creatively.
- Help them to develop empathy and compassion for others.
- Provide opportunities for them to lead and participate in decision-making.
- Celebrate their accomplishments and encourage them to never give up on their dreams.

Inspiring Stories of Young People Changing the World

Malala Yousafzai is a Pakistani activist for female education and the youngest Nobel Prize laureate. She was shot in the head by the Taliban in 2012 for speaking out in favor of education for girls. She survived the attack and continued her activism, speaking out for the rights of all children to education.

Greta Thunberg is a Swedish environmental activist who is known for her work on climate change. She began protesting outside the Swedish parliament in 2018, demanding action on climate change. Her activism has inspired millions of people around the world to take action on climate change.

Amanda Kanyi is a Kenyan social entrepreneur who is working to improve the lives of people in her community. She founded the Peace of Mind Foundation, which provides a safe space for children to learn and play. She also works to provide access to clean water and sanitation in her community.

The Khmer Girls in Action is a group of young women in Cambodia who are working to end violence against women and girls. They provide support to victims of violence, educate people about women's rights, and advocate for changes in the law.

These are just a few examples of the many young people who are making a difference in the world. They are inspiring us to believe that change is possible and that we all have a role to play in creating a better world.

The future of our world depends on the young people of today. By supporting them and investing in their education and development, we can help them to become the leaders and innovators who will change the world for the better.
