Plot Summary

Patrick is a young man who is struggling to come to terms with the death of his father. He has always been close to his father, and his death has left a huge hole in his life. Patrick feels lost and alone, and he is unsure of what to do with his life.

In an attempt to find some happiness, Patrick starts dating again. He meets a series of women, but none of them seem to be right for him. He either feels like he is settling for less than he deserves, or he is simply not ready to be in a relationship.

Eventually, Patrick meets a woman named Sarah. Sarah is different from any other woman he has ever met. She is kind, compassionate, and understanding. Patrick feels like he can finally be himself around Sarah, and he begins to fall in love with her.

However, Patrick's happiness is short-lived. Sarah is diagnosed with cancer, and Patrick is once again faced with the possibility of losing someone he loves. Patrick is determined to make the most of the time he has left with Sarah, and he spends every waking moment by her side.

Sarah eventually passes away, and Patrick is once again left heartbroken. However, he knows that he was lucky to have met Sarah, and he is grateful for the time they had together. Patrick eventually finds happiness again, but it is a different kind of happiness than he ever experienced before. He learns to appreciate the small things in life, and he finds joy in the memories of his loved ones.
